Who are humanists?

A humanist is a non-religious person who shapes their own life in the here and now, because they believe it's the one life they have.

1

Humanists see no evidence to believe in gods or an afterlife. They try to do good for its own sake, without expectation of reward after death.

2

Humanists act morally

3

on the basis of humanity's natural capacity for compassion, empathy, cooperation, and our ability to help and support others.
