

What do humanists think about human beings?

Humanists believe that humans are part of the natural world, with evolved capacities like reason, compassion, and imagination.

1

We are capable of great acts of selflessness and compassion, but also make mistakes – so we should work to improve ourselves and society.

2

Humanists celebrate the potential of human beings to solve problems, progress, and live well together.

3

